been surpassed, and it may be specially noted as a distinctive merit that caen assumption is a thoroughly finished pertrature. Mr. Frederic Maccabe is essentially an actor who renders full dramatic justice to each character he presents, and, with an unusual stock of attainments, he is enabled single-handed to provide all the qualifications of a full company. He is a berfect master of the art of ventrhoquism, and, as the introduced songs are all written and composed by the vocalist who so efficiently renders them, it must be conceded that tew
